

THE RED BADGE OF COURAGE

by Stephen Crane

One boy must reconcile courage, fear and duty as he marches to the battle that will shape his life. The year is 1863 and the United States is immersed in a bloody civil war. This was a time where honor was tested and patriotism redefined. Young Henry Flemming joins the endless marching drudgery toward battle, but flashes of panic interrupt this hard slog. After faltering and losing his way, Henry musters up what courage he has left and, with unforeseen fierceness, leads a charge that captures the enemy's flag, just as he recaptures his own pride and honor.

THE TAMING OF THE SHREW

by William Shakespeare

Shakespeare's irresistible romp features the two daughters of a rich Paduan merchant: Katharina thought of by many as a fiery tempered shrew, and Bianca, who is seen as an angel from heaven. Although there is no shortage of suitors for the lovely Bianca, her father insists she postpone marriage until her elder sister is suitably matched. When the boorish Petruchio announces his willingness to marry any woman with a large enough dowry—even Kate—Bianca's dilemma seems to be solved. But is it possibly Petruchio has met his match in the wild Kate?
